

alpha-En Corporation Announces Move to New Product Development Center and Corporate Headquarters

YONKERS, N.Y., May 30, 2017—alpha-En Corporation (OTC: ALPE), an innovative clean technology company enabling next-generation battery technologies through the production of high purity lithium metal, announced today that it has moved into its new, 8,000 square foot facility in Yonkers, New York. The new facility, part of the innovative iPark Hudson technology and office campus, is now the Company’s innovation and product development center as well as its global headquarters and corporate office.

“Our move to our new facility and headquarters is a milestone for alpha-En as a company. It is the latest of several important steps we have taken in the past few months, including the completion of a recent private placement, establishing new research agreements with leading academic institutions and putting together a talented management team,” said Jerome Feldman, Founder and Executive Chairman of alpha-En.

Alpha-En CEO Steve Fludder commented, “Now we can move forward and enhance our development program and manufacture samples of our high purity lithium metal for our potential customers and partners. We remain confident that our new process for producing highly pure lithium metal in a manner that has never been done before will be a powerful disruptive force in the rapidly expanding global market for lithium-based rechargeable batteries.”

alpha-En’s network of partners includes the U.S. Department of Energy’s Argonne National Laboratory, Princeton University and the City University of New York.
