Yonkers, New York, November 12, 2018 – alpha-En Corp announced today that the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office ("USPTO") has issued a Notice of Allowance for U.S. Patent Application No. 15/160,013. The patent provides intellectual property protection in the United States for alpha-En's lithium metal having a purity of greater than 99.96 weight percent on a metals basis, free of metal impurities. The allowed patent claims cover high purity lithium having a nanorod morphology, and a wide range of associated products such as lithium batteries, battery-powered devices, sensors, electric vehicles, implantable medical devices, pharmaceutical compounds, and lithium metal compounds and alloys.

Chairman and CEO Sam Pitroda commented: " Today is a great day for our company. With much pride and after over three years of patiently working with our patent attorney K&L Gates we finally can announce reaching an all important milestone in the history of our company. This patent represents the cornerstone of our intellectual property and we are continually building additional patents around it to further strengthen our portfolio . As batteries continue to evolve and become increasingly important in the movement away from fossil fuels towards e-mobility we believe that the purity and controlled nanorod morphology of our lithium metal matters and in fact will be a critical enabler and accelerator of that paradigm shift. Our company is well positioned to be at the center of the energy storage revolution that is taking place right now. We congratulate our entire team for its perseverance and thank our shareholders for their continued support."
